Mokena Boy Has Early Entry In Live Stock Expo

Will County's first entries for the forthcoming Chicago Market Fat Stock and Carlot Competition, to be held at the Chicago Stock Yards November 29 through December 2, were made this week by Howard Handorf, a 15 year old Mokena farm boy.

He has listed entries for two pure bred Aberdeen-Angus baby heaves which he will exhibit in the junior classes of this event, that will take the place of the regular International Live Stock Exposition, cancelled last year as a war measure.

His entries were the blue ribbon winners at the county show last summer.

The Chicago market competition which will comprise all of the fat classes that have been featured in past years at the International, in both open and junior divisions, will offer the same prizes in these classes that have been paid at recent International shows.

Sponsor of the competition is the Union Stock Yard and Transit Company, operators of the Chicago market where the show will be staged. The International Amphitheatre, built as a home for the full exposition, is now being occupied by the army.

B. H. Heide, manager of the International Live Stock Exposition, and in charge of entries for the substitute show, announces that entries will close November 1 for the individual classes and on November 20 for the carlot exhibits of fat and feeder cattle, sheep, and swine.

FORMER LINCOLN ESTATES MAN WRITES INTERESTING LETTER FROM ALASKA

Thomas M. Jennings, a former Lincoln Estates resident who has been in Excursion Inlet, Alaska for quite some time, has recently written the following interesting letter to County Clerk Joseph Hartley of Will County:

Excursion Inlet, Alaska
August 25, 1943

Mr. J. Hartley,
Joliet, Ill.

Dear Friend:

I meant to drop you a few lines before this. I have been up here now over six months and I hope to get home for awhile in the next few weeks.

By the way I found it is not possible to ship any salmon due to war time delays and regulations. There is one of the largest canneries in Alaska here at Excursion Inlet. The canning season closed here the past week.

Last May I had an operation. I was laid up for four weeks but since I went back to work I have worked about three months without a hitch seven days a week. The last few days before I went back I took a trip to Juneau by air. It's a half hour from here by air, but nearly all day trip around by boat. I had a wonderful view of Alaska by air. Juneau is a nice little city. The stores were pretty well stocked when I was over there.

July was one of the coldest and wettest on record. It averaged 52.8 for the month and several inches of rain above normal, but we had nice weather in May and June. August has been better than July so far, but we don't stop for weather up here. I have worked many a shift in a drizzle.

There is still a few spots of snow on some of the mountain sides around here. The scenery is wonder full and inspiring on clear days.

Well I'll bring this to a close for this time.

Yours sincerely,
Thomas M. Jennings

NEW LENOX MAN FAVORS CONSERVATION OF NATURAL RESOURCES

Dear Bill:

Do you remember the discussions you and I used to have regarding the subject of Conservation? I am still as interested as ever in the subject and have a thought for today which I am passing on to you.

We are again approaching that time of the year when the morning air is crisp and a light frost is to be seen clinging to the grass in the lowlands. The trees and bushes in the woods are changing from their fresh summer green to a maze of fall colors, blended to make a picture of beauty that cannot be reproduced by any artist, save one, the Artist who created it. This Artist does not work with brush and Oils-He works with trees and soil and water and man can never hope to compete with such artistry.

In our great cities this natural Fall picture is not to be found. It is there in the man-made world that trees are considered a nuisance and are cut down to make way for that which we call progress.

In this man-made world of today we are in the throes to a period of destruction where men are striving to destroy each other and are depleting the natural resources of the earth in so doing. We are in a period of turmoil a period when sorrows and worry are a burden to mankind.

I am speaking of the man-made world, the world of great cities, of factories and smaller communities. There is another world. It is the world of Nature, the world of trees of wildlife and of streams and lakes.

In this world it is impossible to long upset the stability of this natural life. In this world of naturalness, of trees and wildlife we men seem to find relaxation when our nerves are torn, when we are crushed by our own folly.

When man exhausts himself in this period of destruction, when our boys come home, they will need the rest and relaxation to be found in the natural goodness of the outdoors with its birds, its fish and its animal life.

When I look into the woods Bill and see the changing colors today I see more than just the trees standing there. I see the naturalness, the honesty in this other world, this world which was man's original natural home and to which he always returns for restoration.

If the man made world could have the honesty, the stability and the peace of this other world, we would never again see a period of hate and destruction such as we are now going thru.

Bill, I have long been interested in the conservation of our natural resources and of our wildlife. It seems that it is becoming increasingly important that we strive to keep that which is inherently ours, and to which we always return to restore ourselves, this other world.

Your friend,
R. Melvin Whitaker

PAYS TRIBUTE TO WILL COUNTY PIONEER DAIRYMAN

By William A. Baldwin

How an obscure creamery operator from Peotone came to Joliet in the early years of the present century and made a fortune out of an idea is being told today. The story concerns Frank Baumgartner last remaining dairy man of the old school, who was buried aged 87 with honors on Saturday, Sept. 18.

Baumgartner's idea was that Joliet housewives had never had an adequate supply of high butterfat test milk brought to their doors. He had failed in the creamery business at Peotone after sending his mud bespattered trucks into surrounding territory over roads impassable some months of the year.

Comes to Joliet

At the county seat he found conditions made to his order for a new dairy enterprise. Milk of an indifferent quality was the order. The county was in the midst of a newspaper crusade to drive out the supply of tubercular milk cows that had filtered into the dairy districts from Wisconsin. Culls of this sort were forbidden the market under stringent legislative action in the neighboring state but were dumped at Mokena and at other points.

Arrived in Joliet and in possession of the fine Rudd farm a short distance southeast of the city, he built a modern circular barn, ample ventilation and acreage for pasture for his herd. While at that time Baumgartner had not been converted to the idea that bovine tuberculosis could be transmitted to humans, he took precautions, and a portion of his plan became incorporated in the inspection plan all dairy farmers must undergo for their premises before they can ship into Chicago or supply the local trade.

Later on, believing that he had a feeding method for hogs that would fend off hog cholera, he arranged with officials of the C B & Q railway for what turned out to be a spectacular test. Hogs from infected and non-infected herds were turned into a lot separated by a wire fence only. The experiment failed but it had the effect of focusing attention upon the new serum treatment coming out of the state university. As everybody knows this procedure is now routine.

When Theodore Roosevelt split the Republican leaders over the admission of impotent delegates from the solid south in national conventions, Baumgartner followed Teddy and along with Ira C. Copley, Edward Corlett, Ed A. Brewster, Adam Clow and others organized the progressive movement in this district. It will be recalled that Mr. Copley was twice elected to congress from the 11th district, first in 1912 and again two years later as a Progressive.

It is noted as the activities of Mr. Baumgartner are recounted that failures and successes alternated as fits into the pattern of an aggressive man. Dairymen throughout the early agitation for hard roads led the movement and Baumgartner fought to the end the cumbersome three-commissioner set up in this county until it was finally legislated out by enactment of a bloc of downstate farmers in the legislature after a referendum in Joliet township had failed.

OCT-15

is the LAST DAY you can mail Xmas packages to SOLDIERS overseas

YOUR POST OFFICE WILL ADVISE YOU ON THE DETAILS

Washington, D. C. INDIA AND U. S.

Despite the Churchill visit and the impending campaign in Burma, conditions inside India still remain one sore spot where Anglo-American relations, frank and friendly as they are, could stand some cleaning up.

All of the President's special advisers have brought home more or less the same reports. They include: Laughlin Currie, member of the White House staff; ex-Undersecretary of War Louis Johnson; Special Ambassador Billy Phillips.

Latest evidence of Indian sore spots is a report to Leo Crowley, new Economic Warfare administrator from his New Delhi representative, John Fischer, who writes:

"The government of India, the British army, and many Indian businessmen view the opening of an OEW (Economic Warfare) office here with frank and deep-rooted suspicion. This suspicion is not directed at us alone; it falls on all American representatives in India.

"The American Mission was established here in 1941 in the face of considerable reluctance on the part of the government of India. (Previously the United States had not been permitted even a consulate in New Delhi.) The OWI, OSS and even lend-lease representatives have told us that they have been received here with open misgivings—and in the case of the first two agencies, sometimes with hostility. Before our arrival, the government of India raised a number of questions regarding our mission with the American Mission.

"We have reason to believe that our movements have been under close observation, both here and in England, and that surveillance is likely to continue.

Reasons for Coolness.

"There seem to be two main reasons for this attitude," Fischer reported to Crowley.

"1. The fear that American representatives may send to Washington, through channels not subject to British censorship, information concerning the internal situation in India. This, the government of India seems to believe, might stimulate American sympathy for the Nationalist movement and criticism of the government's ineffective administrative techniques.

"2. Fear of American post-war commercial competition. This concern seems to be shared alike by the British and many large Indian businessmen. It has been so pronounced that the mission thought it expedient, shortly before our arrival, to assure the government that OEI activity in India is in no way concerned with trade promotion.

"To offset the cool attitude of the government of India, the American Mission has received us with a helpfulness and kindness which has exceeded expectations. . . . we are confident that despite all this we can manage fairly well."

TO RELAX RATIONING OF FARM MACHINERY

Agricultural officials have been closeted for several days working on an announcement which will be good news to farmers. They are planning to relax the rationing of farm machinery.

Relaxation will take two forms. One will be to permit farm machinery companies more latitude in distributing their products to different parts of the country. The other will be to take certain machines definitely off the ration list.

Although plans are not quite complete, it is probable that most farm machinery will be unrationed from now on except tractors, combines, hay batters, beet lifters and similar mechanized equipment. In general, tractor implements will be taken off the list, though tractors will stay on.

It will still be necessary for farmers to go to their ration boards to get permission to buy certain farm machinery, but this will be only for the purpose of making sure that they are legitimate farmers and really need the equipment. The old system of strict rationing on most farm machinery will go by the boards.

Hitherto, farm implement companies have been required to distribute their products equally throughout the United States, so that some counties where little wheat is raised have received as many binders as counties in the middle of the wheat belt. Or in some cases, too much corn machinery has been sent to counties where little corn is raised, while corn belt counties have been slighted.

The new order will permit farm implement companies to use more discretion in order to avoid inefficient distribution.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Looking at the hefty girth of Sen. Edwin C. Johnson of Colorado, who tips the beam above 225 pounds, you would never guess that he eats only one meal a day.

MUSTERING-OUT PAY AND A TAX IDEA

THE PRESIDENT'S PROPOSAL to give all men of the armed forces a sum as muster-out pay to tide them over the period of looking for a job, sounds good but in reality is it more than a kindly gesture?

At an average of $300 for each man the total would be around three billions of dollars. That three billions must be paid by the American taxpayers which will include the men who served in the armed forces. We propose to give to each of them, say $300, and then over the years, take all of it and more away from them in the form of income taxes.

The mustering-out process will be gradual. The men will not all be discharged as soon as the war is over. There will be a world police job to be done and a goodly percentage of American soldiers will want a place in that job. In that gradual process of mustering out peacetime industry will absorb most of those who need or want jobs.

The men of the armed forces are young. The greater portion of them unmarried. Practically all of them have homes where they will be welcomed. They will have ample opportunity and time to look for jobs. As the years pass these young men will assume ever-increasing responsibilities. They will have homes and families of their own. A percentage of them will succeed to a point where they will not need special consideration. A much larger percentage will not secure above, and many of them will be below, the average annual income. To these larger numbers some help year by year would be of far greater value than a $300 cash payment when given a discharge.

A graduated income tax reduction to all veterans of World War II would provide a year by year compensation in proportion to their needs. Taxes for many years to come will be heavy. They will not drop much, if any, below 20 per cent of income in the lower brackets. If the veteran, whose tax would be $80 a year, had to pay but $40 it would be a big help year after year. The graduation to be such so the veteran who had succeeded financially would have, at least, no greater total exemption than the one who had not.

Such an income tax reduction would, over the years, amount to much more than the suggested $300. It would come at a time when it would, for the great majority, be more needed than at the muster-out date. It would mean that those who fought the war for us would not, through the years, be forced to pay as much of the cost as those who did not share with them the dangers and hazards and trials of the battlefronts. It would be more than a gesture.

INDUSTRY'S SHARE OF BUSINESS INCOME

WHAT PORTION of the receipts of industry does labor receive as its dividend from the partnership of labor, capital and management? Including the cost of the labor involved in the production of raw materials and transportation, together with the direct payrolls of the steel plants, labor, in 1942, received as its share just about 70 cents out of each dollar of steel sales. Of the other 30 cents taxes took over six cents of each dollar sale. The hundred thousand and more stockholders, who provide the tools and buildings and working capital, received less than four cents of each sales dollar as a dividend, on which they paid income taxes. After paying the cost of material and transportation, exclusive of the labor involved, and paying management, there was nine cents of each sales dollar left to provide for a rainy day. It would seem that labor gets a fair share.

BUSINESS PSYCHOLOGY

SOME MONTHS AGO I dropped into a food market and was impressed by two things. One was that I was the only prospective customer at what was usually a busy hour in a food market. The other was a number of signs displayed on the walls. One sign read: "Your credit is not good." Another: "Our business is to sell, not to visit." A third: "If you do not like what we have, buy elsewhere." There were others of a similar slap-in-the-face character. I did not buy and it was my first and only visit to that store. Those signs told the reason for a lack of customers. The store has since been closed by the sheriff and the one-time owner condemns the public for failure to patronize a home institution. He was not a student of psychology.

WHEN IT has all been boiled down, all the useless verbiage removed, the thing the American soldier, sailor or marine is fighting for is freedom to improve the opportunity his country and its way of life offer him.

FOR THE NEXT several years the "planning" job of the agricultural department will call for producing more food, rather than less. We once paid a bonus for not raising hogs; possibly we should now pay for raising them.

The mirror is turned end-wise and the irregularities of the frame covered with cream colored curtains of unbleached muslin hung from a rod attached to the picture molding.

But that is not the last of the old buffet. The turned legs are here made into lamps. The base of each is a square piece of one-inch lumber which is screwed through the center to the largest end of the leg piece. An electric fixture such as is often used in candle sticks is then inserted in a hole bored in the other end. The lamp shades and the butter-tub stool are covered with the cream colored muslin.

NOTE—The complete story of the old buffet and how its various parts were used is in BOOK 7 of the series offered with these articles. Directions for making a spool table similar to those illustrated are in BOOK 5. Also the directions for the rug illustrated are in BOOK 5. Books are 15 cents each. Send your order to:

Stripes First

Stripes of the American flag are 17½ months older than the oldest stars. The Grand Union flag, which was the Continental emblem from January 2, 1776, until June 14, 1777, consisted of 13 stripes, alternately red and white.

The stars were introduced into the flag when the Continental Congress adopted the Stars and Stripes officially.

CHAPTER I

We were agreed, that warm October evening as we sat gazing down from the hills upon the twinkling lights of Los Angeles, that the story of Elsa Chatfield should be written. Elsa, we thought, typified something eternal in the spirit of American youth—something so fascinating to us older individuals that it should be set down as a part of the permanent record of the American scene.

There was a difference of opinion, however, as to where the story should begin. Dwight Nichols was for omitting all mention of Aunt Kitty and starting in boldly with the baby.

"Babies are always good to open with. New life, you know. Everything before them. The world and the devil. Of course, I'm not a writer, Barry, as you are; I'm only a sportsman."

Huntton Rogers has since denied that he foresaw even the smallest part of the story which began that night in the hills overlooking the vast metropolitan area of Los Angeles and had its end far down the West Coast of Mexico. And, of course, Dwight Nichols and I were merely talking in the air when we agreed that the story of Elsa Chatfield should be written, for the story then was only about to begin.

"You know, Barry," Dwight said, looking off over the vast meadow of twinkling lights below us, "I thought once that I understood women. But that was when I was younger. I could have done justice to Elsa then."

Margaret Nichols at this moment came out and joined us, sitting on the top step with her cigarette which she smoked lazily. It was one of those rare nights in California when one could sit out of doors comfortably, and her bare arms and throat seemed to smolder whitely in the half light which shone from the living room windows. There was a quality of exquisiteness about Margaret that explained Dwight; he had a passion for the exquisite, and Margaret loved him devotedly. Margaret now desired our company.

"I don't like the piano and the singing. Not now, anyhow," she said. "Nobody can sing these horrible modern songs, if they really can be called songs. Did I interrupt you, darlings? Forgive me and go right on talking."

"We were just talking, dear. Speculating about woman," said Dwight, lighting a fresh cigarette. "We mentioned Elsa Chatfield and then came to rest upon Aunt Kitty."

"Lovely old cat," said Margaret.

"Did you know her, Hunt?"

"No, Margaret," replied Rogers.

"A plump, sleek tabby who sat a lifetime on silk cushions over in Pasadena, then at the end sank her claws in Elsa and died. She ought to have had a love affair—and a baby!"

Dwight blew a cloud of ghostly smoke into the shadows and said that Elsa's aunt had been in love once. Margaret was incredulous.

"You didn't know Sam Chatfield—Elsa's father—did you, Hunt?" asked Margaret, turning to Rogers. Huntton Rogers said that he had not. "I was right in thinking that you came into our circle after Sam died. He was a small, round, reddish man who quite remarkably had no egotism. Dwight, I think, is a little taller than Sam. Anyway, he bounced like a rubber ball when he walked, and he was something in a bank in Pasadena."

"Sam Chatfield sat behind a huge mahogany desk all day and said no. That's an awfully hard sort of job, don't you think?" she said seriously. "For just imagine men coming with ambition and hopes, or in desperate straits about their finances and needing money, and having to say no to them. Any decent person would feel it dreadfully. And, of course, Sam did, because he was a decent sort, you know. He simply clutched decency to himself with all the passion of a fierce new love. Of course, to make up for it, Sam had to say yes when he was away from the bank, and so he never said no to anything that concerned Elsa or himself. Aunt Kitty was beyond his yes and no, because she was wealthy."

"Then one day he died, and they discovered that he'd said yes and not no to himself too often. Aunt Kitty quieted the loss at the bank with her own money, because there was family pride, you know. But you can imagine what that meant to Elsa. Her mother was dead. Either Elsa didn't like Mexico, or Sam thought it best for her to be up here—she did visit him, though, occasionally. Anyway, Elsa had to move in with Aunt Kitty and go on listening to Aunt Kitty talking, talking, talking. Poor Elsa! She was twelve then, and managed in a year or two to escape to school in the East. And after that—well, there was the baby. She was seventeen by that time."

"But who is there who could possibly want to make away with Aunt Kitty—if that is what really happened?" I asked, moved somewhat by what Huntton Rogers had said before Margaret came out.

Nobody could think of a reply at once, then Dwight's chair stirred and he cleared his throat reluctantly. "Well," he began, "that, of course, is why there are detectives—like Hunt Rogers."

"Not detective, Dwight," Rogers interrupted quickly. "I'll admit that I've been drawn into more than my share of affairs of that kind. I prefer to be known, however, for what I am—namely, a humble professor of English literature."

"Sorry, Hunt. I didn't mean anything."

"No apologies, Dwight; it's not important. What were you going to say, though?"

Again I thought I detected a reluctance in Dwight Nichols' manner. "Oh—I've thought at times, since Kitty Chatfield's death, what embarrassment an unimaginative sleuth could cause me. You see, I have a motive—"

"A motive, darling?" Margaret's voice held a startled note.

"Yes. You see, that Cabazon property—Kitty Chatfield and I owned it in joint tenancy, with right of survivorship. It doesn't matter now how the arrangement came about. But, when Kitty Chatfield

"Yes. You see, that Cabazon property—Kitty Chatfield and I owned it in joint tenancy, with right of survivorship. It doesn't matter now how the arrangement came about. But, when Kitty Chatfield a burst of laughter conceived in a sudden little ecstasy of humor. "Fancy! I never thought of calling him that before! And I've known him for years too. To Mr. James Chesebro, Dwight, trustee," she said pompously. Freeing her arms she drew in the air before her own beautiful figure a great stomach and strutted in the grass.

"He and I are through with each other now. We don't have to hate each other any longer. We're both glad, of course. Aunt Kitty cuts me loose today. I'm on my own." There was an exuberance, an elation in her voice. The fact was thrilling to her.

Dwight already had explained the arrangement. There had been no money she could count on from her father after he went to Mexico; Aunt Kitty had assumed her expenses. But at her death Elsa had been disinherited.

"She gave her the income from the estate for a year from the date of her death," Dwight had said, "knowing that Elsa ought to have something out of it, but darn well confident she wouldn't."

Sounds of laughter came from the house as we mounted the steps and burst in upon the others. I lost, of course, the soft touch of Elsa's hand upon my arm and the comfort of her nearness to me, for she flew to embrace one of the girls among the crowd of young people making merry in the living room. But not, however, before she had tossed to me over her shoulder the urgent command, "Barry, don't go away tonight without me."

I have no doubt that Jimmy the Cheese, as Elsa called him that night, was relieved that the departed Aunt Kitty finally had cut loose her niece. An old ladies' home, even though it were filled top and bottom with tea-and-toast old ladies, was a much easier task for a dignified administrator, almost middle aged, than just Elsa. She had sent him her expensive motor car that morning, and a letter explaining: "You're aware that Aunt Kitty didn't expect me to have a cent left today. So I'm not disappointing her. I can't think of keeping anything my dear aunt's money has paid for."

"And I haven't," said Elsa from her chair beside the piano, that evening she joined us at Dwight and Margaret's. "Not a penny—or anything her money has given me—". She stopped in vague alarm. She had not spoken the truth. The process of her thought was visible in her face. "Except the clothes on my back." Dismay was in her eyes. "And—" She stood up and tugged first at her cuffs, then at the shoulder of her dress. "I'll not keep these any longer."

"Do them all up in a nice package, Dwight, and send them tomorrow to Mr. Chesebro, with love from Elsa. Be sure to put in the love." She smiled down upon Dwight as he gathered the small bundle, one tawny, beautifully tanned arm pointing to where the ring had rolled. "And, Margaret, dear, please get me one of your old suits for a working girl."

Margaret arrived instantly with a heavy apricot negligee and the working girl suit was searched out within the seclusion of Margaret's bedroom.

Huntton Rogers is a large man, probably six feet tall and with a frame in proportion. He has mild blue eyes, such as I have never seen elsewhere; his ears are prominent, as is his nose, the latter not to his disadvantage. The blond hair is beginning to thin on top. He looked up at me after a few moments and spoke so quietly that nobody else in the room could hear him.

"She hated her Aunt Kitty, didn't she? Bitterly."

"There's no doubt of it."

He went on playing. He displayed a remarkable skill. If I had not stood watching the dexterity of his left hand, I'd have thought he was playing a two-handed composition.

"What did Aunt Kitty die of?" he asked, glancing up again.

"An overdose of morphine."

His flying fingers executed a long run.

"Was she an addict?"

"Yes."

"Self administered?" he inquired, finishing the piece with a restful chord.

"The police said yes; the district attorney's office, as you are aware, has doubts."

"It's a stone rolled away from the tomb," said Elsa, full of classical allusions, her quiet voice devoid, however, of the theatrical. "It's Tantalus fed at last and Sisyphus at the top of the hill. The dead hand has let go its terrible grip." She drew her head back and breathed immensely of the moonlit night. "Barry, oh, you can't imagine, even with that trick author's imagination of yours, what it means to be free! Free of Aunt Kitty and the centuries of 'No' and 'Cannot'! It's freedom, Barry, when I thought freedom had forsaken me."

Notes of a City Slicker:

When Alexander Woolcott graduated from Hamilton College he never stopped talking about his alma mater.

So when the dramatic critic passed on, it was natural that his ashes be interred at Hamilton College Cemetery—with a few intimate friends and associates attending the services. . . . It rained hard for a whole day and night before the urn containing his ashes was lowered into the ground. . . . However, someone miscalculated. . . . The ribbons by which the urn was lowered proved two feet short. . . . And so the urn had to be dropped into the hole partly filled with mud and water) and when it fell—all the mourners standing around the grave were splashed.

"Just like Alec!" said a bespattered pal. "To the last—a critic!"

You can't get a work of art out of Italy if you are not an Italian citizen, according to Billy Rose, an art collector himself. . . . A pal of his in Italy not long ago offered $100,000 for a Rembrandt and was informed that he could take it with him by having a likeness of Mussolini painted over it. . . . The paint, it was explained, could easily be washed off without damaging the Rembrandt. . . . "If they see you with a picture of Il Duce," said the dealer, "they will not stop you."

And so the art lover paid the $100,000 and had no trouble bringing the picture into the United States. . . . Where he easily washed away the painting of Mussolini to discover it was an oil of Mussolini!

We asked a movie director how some of them acquired great reputations. . . . He offered this example. . . . A famous character actor, in one of his early films, was doing a desert scene in which he was to portray a man dying of thirst. . . . The director tried to get the actor to register the proper emotion, but the terrible ham only managed to look farcical. . . . Finally, after repeated failure, the director gave up. . . . To get the idea across, however, he decided to photograph the actor's feet throughout the scene—showing him staggering along the desert—dropping one of his possessions after the other: First he dropped his pack, then his gun, and finally his canteen. . . . The critics voted that scene the outstanding one in the film!

Hecklers of the administration are having a field day with this one. . . . In Sicily, they'd have you believe, a peasant invited a comrade to his home for a feast. . . . After two bowls of soup, double offerings of entree and a three-inch American sirloin steak plus several ears of Indiana corn on the cob (loaded with Maryland butter), Idaho potatoes (with more butter) and Georgia watermelon and oodles of New York cream for their delicious Yankee Doodle coffee, the guest beamed his appreciation.

"Not yet!" interrupted the host. "Now comes dessert!"

"What kinda dessert? How can we eat any more?"

"Now comes Tootsie Rolls!" said the host.

"Tootsie Rolls?" asked the guest.

"What's Tootsie Rolls?"

"Who knows?" shrugged the host.

"Lend-Lease!"

The Magazines: Liberty scoops the field with a report alleging that New York school children find their lessons so exciting they hate going home when the bell rings. . . . I don't believe it. . . . Newsweek states that the 4th year of the war produced only one great Allied general—Sir Harold Alexander. . . . Zato? How about Gen. Eisenhower, who may be FDR's running mate in the 1944 Presidential race? . . . Sumner Welles' typewriter ran away from him, judging by his text in Coronet. Diplomatic jobs, he noted, are non-political and bring success if worked at hard enough. . . . Would he say that now? . . . In the SEP there is a nice, warm tale of the newspaper men covering the South Pacific. The biggest peril of the job, warns the author, is capital "I" poisoning. . . . H. Brubaker's best item in his New Yorker kidding: "The housing crisis in Washington is evidently worse than ever. Drew Pearson has had to move into the doghouse."

Lieut. Col. Elliott Roosevelt, enjoying a well-deserved lull in the Stork Club the other night, was being congratulated by intimates.

"You are thinner in the face," said a newspaper man, and then pointing to his ribbons, added, "but a lot heavier across the chest."

"The only decoration that really counts," was the reply, "is the Purple Heart Medal, which I wish I had!"

The Purple Heart is awarded only to the wounded. . . . Elliott's adventures cost him 43 pounds.

JESUS AND THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:17-20; 19:16-22; John 5:39, 40.

GOLDEN TEXT—Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.—Matthew 5:17.

With this lesson we begin a series of studies which should be of unusual value, a consideration of the Ten Commandments in the light of the teachings of Jesus, and other related New Testament passages.

It is appropriate to point out that, far from being outmoded, the Ten Commandments are really the basis of all moral law. They need a diligent restudy and re-emphasis in our day of disregard of moral standards.

As interpreted by the Lord Jesus and applied to our daily living, the truth of these commandments should be brought home to every boy and girl, man and woman in our Bible schools.

We learn here that our Lord did not come to set aside or destroy the law, but to fulfill it in the most complete way. But the gospel takes us a step beyond the law, and it is a great step, for we follow the One who is greater than the law.

I. Built on the Law (Matt. 5:17-20).

The law of God is eternal, never to be abrogated, never set aside. Christ Himself, although we might properly say that He was in reality the Lawgiver and thus had power and authority over the law, indicated His purpose in coming to be that of giving the law its full meaning, not of destroying it. One could wish that those who profess to be His servants might have the same measure of regard for God's law. If they did, they obviously would not be so ready to ignore it, so quick to change it or explain it away, and far more ready to accept with their Master every "jot and tittle," that is, even the minutest detail of His Word.

Recognizing Christ as the fulfillment of the law should prepare one to manifest obedience to every moral precept through His grace.

II. More Than the Law (Matt. 19:16-22).

Obedience to the commandments brings a man up to the very entrance upon life, but to enter in, he must have more than the "things" of the law; he must have the Person who is "the Door" to eternal life.

The young man who came to Christ was rich. His mind was obsessed with things. He had made it his business to observe the law, and had done well (v. 20), but his soul was not satisfied. He thought one more "thing" to do would accomplish his purpose.

The general attitude of the man was commendable. He sensed his lack of the vital something which would remake his life. He came to the right one—the Lord Jesus—with his question.

His failure to go beyond the things of the law to a faith in Christ, however, showed that he loved his possessions more than he desired to follow the Lord.

Those in our day who are trying to please God and gain eternal blessedness by works, by doing things and keeping commandments, need to recognize that in Christianity we have the One who is more than the law. They need to look away from things to be done, to the great thing that was done once and for all on Calvary.

III. Greater Than the Law (John 5:39, 40).

The Scriptures are great because they bear witness to the Christ who can give life. But obviously the One to whom they bear witness is greater than they are.

Paul speaks of the law as a "schoolmaster to bring us to Christ" (Gal. 3:24). The picture is literally of a servant charged with bringing the child to school where he may learn the truth. So the law convicts man of sin, makes him conscious of his own utter inability to meet God's requirements, and makes him ready to turn to Christ in faith and repentance (Rom. 3:20).

These men of our Lord's time were very religious. They spent much of their time searching the Scriptures that they might find eternal life. But most of them failed to understand that the life they sought was in the One who stood before them—Jesus of Nazareth—and not in the letter of the law.

This has a vital bearing on the proper study of the lessons of this quarter. "The time has passed when men might seek life in the Scriptures apart from Jesus. Now that Jesus has come, life can be found only if the Scriptures lead one to Jesus."

"If our study of the Scriptures does not bring us to Christ, then it is vain indeed. For that reason we cannot study the Ten Commandments without turning constantly to Jesus as the One greater than the law" (Lesson Commentary).

Dear Mr. Semmler:
I have been receiving the News-Bulletin for over a year now and although it may show indifference for not writing before now in expressing my thanks I really enjoy the paper very much. It brings you in close contact with the happenings back home and there's nothing like reading home town news.

Our Organization has been down here in Louisiana since the 22nd of June, previously we had been in Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and we completed two months of maneuvers last August 10. Since then we have been stationed in Camp Polk here. Once again may I say, thank you, wishing you and everyone back home happiness and good health. I remain,

Cordially yours,
Pfc. John DeHaan, Ser. 36357041, Co. L, 377 Inf. APO 95, Camp Polk La.

August 17, 1943.

Dear Friends:
Received your most welcome letter yesterday and was glad to hear from you.

I wrote to you sometime ago, but you said in your letter you haven't heard from me in a long time, the letter must have gotten lost.

I had a seven day furlough last month. I got to see Irving Siemen who is only thirty miles from me, but I must travel 80 miles to get to him. Also got to see Fred Willman who is about 100 miles from here. They both look fine and in the best of health the same as I am. I did not get to see Bill Siemen. We don't have to have the commanding officers permission to get packages from home. All we have to do is write home asking for some thing and show the letter to the postmaster and he will o. k. it. If you could I would like to have a sweater for this winter. I think I could use a size 36. The shirts I wear have a 33 sleeve. How about some good American candy?

Thanks to the Service Club. I am still getting The Tinley Times: It gets here about a month late, but I still like to read it.

Do you ever hear from J. Meade Wilson? What is his address? The last time I heard from him was at Wendover Field over a year ago.

That's all for now. Here's a big Hello to everyone from

Your Friend,
Cpl. Ervin Batterman

Dear Miss Rogers:
I received your letter of May 19, two months late, but enjoyable none the less. As you can see, the mail situation is haphazard to say the least. So your letter was most welcome. We have never met, yet from the topics you discuss in your long letters are of the most intimate. I don't want to appear too tender, but your mention of Jonquils, Narcissia, and Daffodils was such an unexpected note and such a welcome one. All we hear about these days are tanks and planes; ships and guns and all the fierce fingers of Mars. The noise and subsequent malestrom of a civilization gone mad. We have witnessed naught but the cacophonous sounds and strident notes of a disillusioned world. Until we who are in the vanguard of this discordant mob find ourselves pausing and amazing ourselves, pausing and thinking of Jonquils, Daffodils and Narcissia. The simple beauty of flowers is such a contrast to war. They seem to be the flower that the seeds of war produce. Though nourished by the blood of men, for the best war poem is about flowers "In Flanders Field The Poppies Grow"—Keep the flowers fresh.

Pray For Me.

Dear Members:
It's been quite some while since I last wrote to you, but we have been quite busy lately and never got around to writing you.

How's everything in Tinley? I hope fine. Give my best to everyone I haven't received a Tinley Times in over a month now, so I'm getting a little behind on the news. I don't know what has happened to them, but I imagine they got lost or tied up some place. But I hope they do catch up with me soon.

Can't think of much to write this time, so I'll have to close with loads of luck to all.

As ever,

August 30, 1943

I want to thank all of you for the nice gift. It was appreciated very much. I hope some day in some way I can return the kindness you have shown. I am getting the Tinley Park Times every week and enjoy it a lot. I am having a rather easy time now in the army. There is nothing to do but water the grass. No training, no hikes, just the easy life of a yard bird. We are still short handed and so even our first Sgt. had to take K. P. Otherwise there is nothing new. So in closing I again want to thank all of you for your kindness and wish you all the best of luck.

Sincerely yours,

I thank each and every one of you for the box which I received from you. I can use all the items contained in that Servicemen's Kit to great advantage.

I want you to know I appreciated your thoughtfulness of the men in the service and thank you again for the very useful gift.

Sincerely,

Farmers Entitled To Kill Own Live Stock

A farmer who resides on his own land is entitled to slaughter as many cattle, calves, sheep, lambs and hogs as he requires to provide a fair share of the civilian meat supply for himself, his immediate family, and his permanent or temporary resident employees, under provisions in Food Distribution Order No. 75, Byron Gaskill, Chairman of the Will County War Meat Committee, explained today.

In addition, such a farmer is automatically entitled to a permit from his County War Board which will allow him to sell up to 400 pounds of meat per year, Byron Gaskill said. While he must collect the proper number of ration points on any and all sales of meat he makes, and turn these in to his local price and rationing board, he need not give up ration points for his own consumption.

The governing factors, determining whether a farmer can slaughter livestock ration point free for his own consumption, are ownership or tenancy of the land and ownership of, or working interest in, the livestock raised on that land, so far as FDO No. 75 is concerned, Mr. Gaskill explained.

A farmer might live in town and or a regular paid employee, and have his land worked by a tenant, still enjoy these slaughter privileges, provided he owned the livestock and the premises on which they were fed, according to Mr. Gaskill.

A banker, or other businessman, who owns livestock but has this livestock raised for him under contract by a farmer, would not be entitled to slaughter any of that livestock, or receive any meat from such livestock when slaughtered, without giving up ration points unless he also holds title to the land, Mr. Gaskill said.

The regulations in FDO No. 75 are clearly intended to allow a farmer to raise and slaughter livestock for meat for consumption by his family and employees. These regulations are not an escape by which people may extend the value of their ration points, nor a means for feeding the black markets that

New Unusual War Book Just Out

Among the many recent books published about the war, is "Men in Motion" by Henry J. Taylor. This is such an unusual book, one which Reader's Digest featured in August and wrote about it again in September.

Mr. Taylor has written more than merely a good "war book." He draws on incisive picture of America's military activities in Africa and the Near East; he also outlines something of the postwar responsibilities which attach to the economie development of these areas. It is a good book to refer to as these problems arise in each community.

Lemon Cake-Top Pudding For The Crowd

By BETTY BARCLAY

NEXT time you plan a church supper or lodge dinner be sure to include Lemon Cake-Top Pudding on the menu as dessert. It's an economical pudding and is easily prepared in large quantities — both chief prerequisites when serving a number of people. What's more, with today's point requirements, this pudding has added benefits in that it requires only small amounts of rationed ingredients.

A factor which must also be taken into consideration when planning a menu for all age groups is the flavor appeal. Lemon flavor has long been universally accepted by young and old and such tangy tartness is an ideal climax to a menu regardless of other courses for it combines well with other taste appeals.

Still another reason why this pudding is a "must" for serving large groups is the fact that it is good as is and needs no sauce or fancy frill to complete the service. That's a time saver you'll agree for often the extra touches require more time than that required to prepare the original dish.

It's always good policy to have prepared a dish in advance of company service so why not begin by surprising the family with it tonight? Here's a recipe for serving four to six and you can easily increase the ingredient amounts for a larger group. Once you've tried this pudding, you'll agree it hits an "all time" record for sheer goodness in taste and ease of preparation. Here 'tis:

Lemon Cake-Top Pudding

Cream:

2 tablespoons flour
1/2 cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter

Add:

2 egg yolks, beaten
1/2 cup lemon juice
1 cup milk

Fold in:

2 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Bake in an 8-inch unbuttered pudding dish or individual custard cups, set in a pan of warm water. Bake 35 minutes in oven (350 degrees to 375 degrees F.) Will form a cake top with a layer of custard below. Serves 4 to 6.

To cooperate with the Government's nation-wide campaign to save manpower, transportation, fuel and critical materials...you are asked by the War Production Board to

Conserve Electricity

... as part of a voluntary program instituted by the War Production Board, the Office of Defense Transportation, the Petroleum Administration for War, the Solid Fuel Administration for War, the Office of War Utilities, and other governmental agencies.

WAR PRODUCTION BOARD
WASHINGTON, D. C.

To Electric Utilities and their customers:

The War Production Board has proclaimed that maximum war production requires the greatest possible conservation of manpower, transportation, fuel, equipment, and critical material such as copper, steel, tungsten and many others—much greater than has been heretofore accomplished. It believes that this greater conservation can be accomplished by the voluntary cooperation of all citizens of our country in the effort. It has called for the institution of a program to effect savings on all home fronts by the Office of Defense Transportation, the Petroleum Administration for War, the Solid Fuel Administration for War, the Office of War Utilities, and other governmental agencies. These agencies have been developing the details of the conservation program.

Each principal industry and agency is organizing to carry the objective of the War Production Board to its members and they, in turn, to their customers so that the fullest conservation may be obtained. This is a definite challenge to each operating unit and each individual in the electric utility industry to do his or her share in backing up our fighting forces. We cannot exert maximum force against our enemies if waste on the home front is tolerated.

In the electric utility industry, the installed generating capacity, together with capacity now under construction, is ample to meet all foreseeable electric needs. But, it is essential to save the use of electricity wherever possible so as to reduce, directly or indirectly, the demands for materials, fuel, transportation, and manpower.

The Office of War Utilities, in consultation with representatives of the electric utility industry, both public and private, has developed a comprehensive program to achieve the objectives of the War Production Board within that industry.

The desired result will be obtained through the full cooperation of millions of people in the conservation program. With everyone contributing, the effect will be tremendous in hastening the day of Victory.

Sincerely yours,

J. A. Krug
Director
Office of War Utilities

SUMMARY OF THE VOLUNTARY CONSERVATION PROGRAM REQUESTED BY THE OFFICE OF WAR UTILITIES

Commercial and industrial establishments have been given requests from the Office of War Utilities for conservation in the use of electricity for—

Indoor and outdoor advertising, promotional and display sign lighting—

Decorative and ornamental lighting, including decorative flood lighting—

Show window lighting which does not provide essential interior illumination—

Lighting of marquees (other than advertising signs) and building entrances—

Lighting of outdoor business establishments—

General interior illumination and show case lighting.

In addition to these requests, general conservation in unnecessary use of electricity has been asked of all commercial, industrial and residential users. Among these are less reduction in temperature and relative humidity in air conditioning, elimination of waste in use of various electric appliances such as refrigerators, ranges, space heaters, water heaters and reduction in use of white way street lighting to lower levels consistent with public safety.

It is pointed out that in order to conserve critical materials used in the manufacture of light bulbs, the desired reduction in lighting should be obtained primarily by turning off lights which are not necessary rather than by substituting lower wattage lamps. Lamp bulbs should not be replaced until completely burned out.

Likewise, no effort is being made to curtail necessary military, aviation and police lighting, lighting essential to public health, including eye-sight conservation and safety, plant protection, transportation and production purposes.

As outdoor recreational activities are considered essential for wartime morale, the use of electric energy necessary for this purpose is not being discouraged, although such economies are urged as can be achieved in these fields without impairment of function.

THIS LETTER asks the cooperation of the power industry and its customers in a broad effort to release critical resources for war purposes. It was accompanied by requests from the Office of War Utilities for conservation of electricity by commercial, industrial and residential users. We are asking all of our customers to cooperate with us in this program, and we will be pleased to assist them wherever possible to meet its objectives.

The program is not intended to reduce lighting in building entrances, interiors and hallways below levels consistent with public safety—nor should lighting for industrial plant protection be reduced. Light for reading or working should be maintained at levels consistent with eye-sight conservation. . . . This Company is glad to do its part in this nation-wide plan of the War Production Board for the conservation of critical resources.

Electricity has gone to war—don't waste it!

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht

St. Peter's Evangelical and Reformed church was filled to capacity last Thursday evening to hear the Fetler family of Riga, Latvia, present their concert. Accompanied by their mother, eight of the thirteen Fetler children were present. The others are away at school or are serving in the United States Army. After a brief introduction by Rev. Erich Bizer, pastor of the church, the family choir and band delighted the audience with their inspiring music. The three smallest children, Joseph, James and Peter took turns in directing the band and sang an European kindergarten rhyme. "Christianity in Soviet Russia" was the subject of a talk by Daniel Fetler, at present a student at Northwestern University. In the absence of his father, Daniel acted as spokesman for the family and related many amusing incidents in the life of these people who were born in several different countries and speak many languages. The offering which was very generous, is for the Educational Fund of the Fetler family. Rev. Rudolf Malek, of the Frankfort Methodist church enjoyed the meeting again, these Russian Christian workers with whom he is well acquainted. They have many mutual acquaintances in Russia and other parts of Europe. This program will be repeated early in October in Tinley Park.

However, this year the regular meeting and "coffee" will be held, the date to be announced later. There will be no monthly "coffee" in December, but a Christmas party for members will be given.

To the People of this Community:

PLAIN WARNING TO YOU!

Here is a plain warning for you . . .

"This war will last until 1949 or longer if the home front fails to back up our men in battle"

Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy.

Buying War Bonds to the point of temporary personal sacrifice is the most direct way you can comply with Secretary Knox's appeal.

"Temporary sacrifice" is the correct phrase because you are only lending your money when you buy War Bonds. This government which never has defaulted on an obligation will pay you back $4 for every $3 invested if you hold the bonds for 10 years.

The least you can do is to back the attack with War Bonds today. Buy extra Bonds above your normal Bond buying.

AMERICAN HEROES

BY LEFF

Two hours after the ill-fated destroyer Hammann was sunk, her skipper, Comdr. Arnold Ellsworth True, was rescued from the water and found to be supporting two enlisted men. He himself was so exhausted that he did not realize both men were dead. Comdr. True, who was awarded the Navy Cross and the Distinguished Service Medal for heroism, typifies the spirit of our men in arms. They give to the limit of their endurance. Do YOUR part! Buy more War Bonds and Stamps!

U. S. Treasury Department

The Third War Loan is your loan. The securities on sale fit your purse. Check the one which is applicable to you and buy it to the point of personal temporary sacrifice. Always keep in mind your sacrifice is only temporary because you do not give your money away when you "buy" War Bonds; you lend your money at interest. Your money is not even frozen. In the event of an emergency—and the record shows that Americans are not redeeming their Bonds except in the event of true emergencies—your Bonds are redeemable.

The United States Government has never in its history repudiated a Government Bond. As further evidence of the strength of this country to guarantee repayment of your money, United States potential wealth amounts to $89,000 per capita. Even with the heavy current war expenses, our national debt is only $1100 per capita.

Only a country like ours could make such a deal with its citizens: repay you with interest for a loan of your money to protect you and your family against enemies which would murder, rob, or enslave you.

The number one "buy" for you is the familiar Series E War Bond. Twenty-seven million American workers are buying Series E Bonds at the rate of $420,000,000 a month. Your Third War Loan duty is to buy at least one extra $100 Series E Bond above your regular buying. Buy more if you can.

Keep these facts in mind about the Series E Bonds:

They come in $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000 denominations. They sell for 75 per cent of their maturity value. They pay you $4 for every $3 invested if held until maturity, which is 10 years from issuing date. You may redeem them at any time 60 days after issue without notice at stated redemption values. Every Bond carries this redemption table.

ONE-TWO-THREE-FOUR-FIVE-SUGGESTIONS

...to help you make better use of your NEW Telephone Directory

WE TRY to make your telephone directory accurate and complete. These five suggestions, if followed, will increase its usefulness.

- 1 Be sure to discard your OLD telephone directory if it was not collected when the new one was delivered. (Don't destroy it—turn it over with other waste paper to your regular collector.)
- 2 If you have a memo list of numbers called frequently, verify these numbers now by looking in your NEW directory.
- 3 Always consult the directory when not sure of the number.

Calling from memory is a common cause of wrong numbers.

4 Look in your directory—don't ask "Information" for numbers listed there. This avoids making two calls instead of one.

5 Use the "Classified" section (yellow pages in most directories) to locate wanted products, services or professional help—especially important now that substitutes must be found.

"While enormous sacrifices are made and staggering sums of money are spent in the present conflict, there has been an even greater battle, with much more in the balance," the Rev. Dr. J. W. Behnken declared last Sunday in his address as guest speaker on the International Lutheran Hour over the Mutual System. "The welfare of all mankind for time and eternity depended on the outcome of Christ's struggle unto death on Golgotha's cross, here you have the very heart of the Christian religion."

"The great English poet Cowper was deeply concerned about his sins and filled with doubt and troubled with despair. In his deep emotional disturbance he paced up and down his room. Finally he took a Bible in search of comfort and strength. He is the former Miss Lillian Helmuth, ceived the power to believe....I saw the complete sufficiency of Christ's atonement for my pardon and my full justification."

Appealing for a nation-wide return to Christ, Dr. Behnken asserted: "Nothing can compare with Christ's sacrifice for us undeserving sinners. The great God-man entered upon the horrors of death that you and I might enter into the glories of eternal life."

Dr. Behnken is president of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other states. This concluding message by Dr. Behnken will be followed by the return to the air of Dr. Walter A. Maier, the regular Lutheran Hour speaker.

A YANKEE veteran was talking about the next world series with the Cardinals.

The veteran gave me three reasons for picking the Yankees to recover the scalp and the winner's end which they lost a year ago.

Here they are—

1. "Last fall, I'll admit, we had them badly underrated. They were a better ball club than we expected to meet. This time we'll be set and ready."

2. "The Cardinals have suffered much heavier losses than the Yankees have. The three men that fed us poison last fall were Johnny Beazley, Terry Moore and Country Slaughter. Pollet would have bothered us a lot. We've lost DiMaggio and Ruffing, while Etten has filled up Buddy Hassett's spot. Beazley, Moore and Slaughter could make a big difference."

3. "With Spud Chandler working as he is, with Bonham and Wensloff ready, we'll have a big edge in pitching. Chandler is hard for any team to beat. Against this Mort Cooper has never been good throwing at our league. Cooper is a strong, winning pitcher. But he's sure to remember what happened in his four American league crashes."

The Cardinal Side

There is some sound stuff in this argument but here is one point the Yankee entry overlooked—the Cardinals have always thought they could beat the Yankees.

The Yankees also overlooked the fact that the Cardinals had better pitching, just as good an outfield and just as good an infield. The sudden collapse of Joe Gordon, a former World Series star, a top competitor under pressure, was the heaviest Yankee jolt.

They have had the better of their meetings in Florida. I never saw a more confident World Series club than they were last fall.

Even when Mort Cooper, their crack pitcher, was hammered out and Red Ruffing was holding them hitless, they were still full of scrap and hustle.

No team that has lost Beazley, Pollet, Terry Moore and Slaughter can be as good as it was. But the same goes for DiMaggio and Ruffing. At present the prospects for a first-class show are bright enough.

Baseball's War Trip

Branch Rickey has the best all-around suggestion for baseball's proposed all-star war tour that I have run across.

His idea is to have two representative outfits from both big leagues tour the home camps of the United States with some form of pennant emblem at stake—where each contest will be a real game, fought to the limit, and not an exhibition scramble that will mean nothing to anyone, including the camps and the ballplayers.

There are heavy handicaps in the way of transporting any teams overseas. For instance:

1. The weather. England is now out on this account and North Africa soon reaches her rainy season.

2. Scarcity of suitable ball parks where a first-class game can be played.

3. The competitive spark that means action and not exhibitions. This leaves Australia as the only available spot and this would be a doubtful tour. Australia is a long way off, needing more fighting men, planes and supplies than ballplayers.

"What's the matter with supplying entertainment and recreation to the millions of service men we have at home?" Mr. Rickey asks.

"Most of these men are camped far from home. They could also use entertainment and recreation."

"But it would have to be the real stuff. No mere exhibition offering would ever get by. These troops know what real baseball is and they wouldn't stand for anything but the best type of competition."

"If such a series was played a complete record of all games should be kept with the club standings carried. Also there should be some form of emblem or trophy to be awarded."

I agree with Branch Rickey. I doubt that any overseas exhibition would work out. It would be better, for overseas work, to use such men as Babe Ruth, Dizzy Dean, Walter Johnson, Frank Frisch and others well known wherever the old flag flies.

The Master Motion

Carl Hubbell is still talking about Walter Johnson's pitching motion.

"Johnson must be around 57 now," he said. "But when I saw him warming up with Bresnahan and pitching to Ruth a few days ago he might have been around 28. What impressed me was the free and easy motion of his arm. As you get older, especially after you've passed 40, the old wing begins to tighten up. It must be worse after 50. But not for Walter. He still has a pretty fair share of the old speed left."

FRANKIE SINKWICH, the No. 1 college football player of 1942, has brought considerable happiness to the National Football league.

In signing with the Detroit Lions, Frankie will bring many an added dollar to the Detroit clubs and to every other team in the circuit. The Lions had no "name" player on their squad at the time—and they needed one at least for the early part of the season.

Sinkwich recently was given an honorable discharge from the marines after serving since the first of the year. He was given a medical discharge after spending some time in the hospital at Parris Island, S. C.

Sinkwich was the most publicized college griddle of the 1941 and 1942 seasons. His name on the roster will draw thousands of cash customers who haven't paid a great deal of attention to the Lions during the past.

The 1942 Season

The Lions, who finished last in the league last season, losing all 11 league games, were privileged to take first pick in the annual college draft, which was held last June in Chicago.

Sinkwich may not have what it takes to be a standout professional player. There have been plenty of big names in college ranks who failed in their professional careers. In fact, most of the top professional teams consist of individuals who never bothered going to college. They figured, and quite logically, that a college degree wasn't at all necessary to success on the professional circuit.

But chances are good that Frankie will become a valuable asset to the unfortunate Lions. Any team that loses all of its season's games can use very handily the services of a name player. He may not do so much toward improving the team's league standing, but he should help the treasury.

And when a player helps one club, he helps the entire league.

The World Series

Just a year ago the New York Yankees were quite firm in their statements that they could do better in Sportsman's park in St. Louis than in their own stadium. Now

JOE MCCARTHY

Manager Joe McCarthy's men are even happier over the 1943 World Series schedule, which calls for them to play the first three games in Yankee Stadium.

The Yankee players—and the New York fans—think the schedule gives the American leaguers a big advantage over the St. Louis Cardinals. But the bookies aren't influenced by intangibles and are hesitant about laying a price on the series. They won't concede the Yanks very much, if anything, because of the so-called "favorable" schedule, and chances are good the odds will be 6-5, take your choice.

Remaining Schedule

The fact that the first three games are going to be played at home isn't as important as the remainder of the schedule. It calls for a two-day travel intermission between the New York and the St. Louis games, and another open date for selling tickets if there is a seventh game.

This schedule means that Spud Chandler, the Yankees' mound ace, will be able to work at least twice and perhaps three times. Chandler won 19 games and lost only three, and is certain to draw the opening assignment from McCarthy on October 5. After four days' rest he will be able to start the first game in St. Louis, on Sunday, October 10. Then, if the series goes the limit, he could take another three-day rest before coming back for the final game.

Then there's big Ernie Bonham, who has won 13 and lost seven. He can be used twice, and Hank Borowy or Rookie Charley Wensloff can be called upon to fill in on the mound when needed.

The schedule works both ways, of course. The Cardinals have the same amount of time for rest, etc. They will have the opportunity to use Mort Cooper two or three times, but on the basis of past performance against the Yankees and other junior circuit hitters, it is doubtful if Manager Billy Southworth figures this balances the books.

AAA Plans to Boost Production, Save Soil

To help prevent disastrous soil depletion through using up of all the stored-up fertility for one tremendous harvest, a fund of 300 million dollars has been made available by congress to assist farmers in carrying out growing practices that will not only increase production immediately, but will also keep the land in condition for another high-level crop in succeeding years. Direct payments from the Agricultural Adjustment agency will be provided in some cases, while in others needed materials will be supplied, such as lime, phosphate and seeds.

Because of the variation in practices adaptable to the different growing regions, state and federal agencies will co-operate in working out an approved list for each state. The rate of payment will be determined by taking into consideration topography, soil, climate, conservation needs in the specific area, and the importance of each practice to production. Farmers will receive payments, as in the past, in proportion to how well they follow the practices for their farms.

Increases in yields per acre of crops in all parts of the country during recent years have been particularly marked in those sections where materials have been generally distributed. For example, before the Triple-A soil improvement program began, the corn yield averaged 23.5 bushels. In the last three years the average corn yield for the United States was 31.5 bushels. Wheat yields went up 4.5 bushels and the hay harvest was upped from a ton and a quarter to a ton and a half, while potatoes increased from 103 to 133 bushels and cotton from

A lime-spreader working on a lettuce field in Cumberland county, Maine. The Agricultural Adjustment agency can provide fertilizer materials and seeds when needed, under its conservation program.

191 to 253 pounds to the acre in the same period.

The 1944 practice program has a five-way emphasis: (1) expansion of agricultural use of lime, phosphate and other fertilizers; (2) promotion of legume, hay and grass seed harvest; (3) erosion control and water conservation measures; (4) range and pasture practices; and (5) supplementing of existing distribution channels, as well as adjustment of manufacture and delivery of lime and phosphate to keep movement on a more equal basis and do away with slack periods.

Approximately 190 million dollars will have been earned by farmers for soil-building and range practices under the 1943 program, according to preliminary estimates. This is an increase of 11 million dollars over 1942, of 68 million dollars over 1941 and of 75 million dollars over 1940, or a raise of 65 per cent in three years.

Agricultural Notes

The domestic wheat supply for the 1943-44 marketing year is now indicated at about 1,400 million bushels, which is 213 million bushels below the record supply in 1942-43.

Small quantities of hydrated lime will effectively deodorize and disinfect poultry manure.

Extremely large draft horses seem to have had their day. Draft mares 16½ hands high and weighing 2,000 pounds are as large as the industry requires. A satisfactory stallion measures 17 hands and weighs 2,000 to 2,200 pounds. Their offspring can be raised largely on roughage and still be big enough to fit the farmer's demands and to reach 16 hands and 1,600 pounds, the popular size for most horse markets.

Good care should be taken of borrowed equipment so it can be returned in the same condition to owner. Machines should not be loaned to anyone without the owner's permission. Owner's attention should be called to any parts damaged or broken before use.

The department of agriculture estimates that crops of dry beans, peas, peanuts, flaxseed, rice, potatoes and sugar cane will be considerably larger than last year, because of increased acreage

Kidneys Must Work Well-

For You To Feel Well

24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, Rheumatic pains, getting up at night, swelling. Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulates the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.
